CSR 35/16/3 MOTION: Walgenbach, second by Sears – that beginning January 1, 2017, each chapter president or designee will be funded by the CSR Corporation to attend each CSR Board week meetings. CARRIED.

9. CalPERS – Brad Pacheco, Deputy Executive Officer, Communications and Stakeholder Relations

Brad Pacheco noted that he came to provide updates and answer questions, extending best wishes from Henry Jones, who is traveling out of the country. The seventeenth annual conference with contracting agencies ended on October 26 – over three days, 825 attendees interacted with CalPERS staff and learned how they conduct business.

CalPERS’ new CEO is Marcie Frost, former executive director of the Washington state pension fund, who also served on the Washington State Investment Board. She is a welcome addition to CalPERS, who understands the issues and cares deeply about members and customer service. It is important to her that PERS is providing the services that members need. The other focus regarding personnel is replacing the chief actuary who just retired, and they hope to have a replacement in the next few months.

A critical issue is the maturing of the CalPERS system, with more people retiring and more retirees than ever before. In addition, people are living longer and CalPERS must pay benefits for a longer period of time. Several years ago there were two active employees for every retiree; today it is one and a half. With fewer active employees paying into the system, PERS is paying out more each year than it receives in contributions from active employees, the state, and contracting agencies, resulting in a negative flow – last year $18 billion was paid out and $14 billion taken in. Another influence concerns the financial market. Growth in the country is slowing; we are in the eighth year since the financial crisis of 2008, and at some point the financial recovery will begin to fall. In 2013, CalPERS’ investment portfolio generated about 7.1%; that same portfolio today is returning about 6%, meaning that investment returns are more important now than ever. The Fund needs more from investments and also needs to be very careful what investments it makes – a downturn in the market can have a dramatic impact. This issue will be a primary focus for CalPERS over the next few months -- Investment staff is working to essentially manage reality by reducing assumptions on investment returns from the current 7.5% to actual reality, which is at best 6.2% over the next 10 years. Active employees covered by PETRA and contracting agencies will have to pay more, and there is more pressure on local governments to pay what they owe CalPERS. CalPERS examines its assumptions every four years with a mid-year checkpoint, looking at what the markets will return over the next several years and considering the demographics of people living longer to ensure the Fund’s long-term viability. CalPERS is developing a strategic plan for the next five years, beginning July 1, 2017. The plan has five main points: (1) fund sustainability; (2) health care affordability; (3) reduction in the complexity of the many retirement options and decisions employees must make when they are retiring; (4) risk management; and (5) continuity of staff, focusing on retaining and empowering employees.

Concluding his presentation, Mr. Pacheco reminded members of two things coming up in 2017 -- transition to the new pharmacy benefit manager, Optum Rx, in January; and elections for the two member-at-large seats held by Michael Bilbrey and J.J. Jelincic. CalPERS is working to make the transition to Optum Rx as smooth as possible, and hopes to increase voter turnout in the elections now that members will be able to vote on-line and by phone.

To a question whether current retirees are at risk for reduction in benefits, he noted that pension reforms have always been applied to new employees -- his team interfaces with the media on a daily basis and it is his responsibility is to ensure that the media understand the importance of defined benefit plans, working to defend employees’ vested rights. For example, staff spends time every day trying to educate the LA Times regarding the long-term viability of the Fund. The City of Loyalton is a small city where employees are at risk for reduced benefits. The city is structuring to pay its contributions, and PERS is working to come to a resolution, but if Loyalton can’t make the employer contributions for its four to six retirees, their benefits may have to be reduced.

To a question concerning divesting investments, such as in tobacco and coal, he reported that the board will be reviewing the tobacco issue in December, to decide whether to continue the policy of not investing in tobacco stocks or return to investing in such stocks, looking at the performance of tobacco stocks and for feedback from stakeholder groups. There is a presentation on the CalPERS website, giving all facts and asking for feedback. The board will also consider feedback from groups such as the Cancer Association. There is an important fiduciary consideration, as CalPERS would have had up to $3 or $4 billion in returns had it remained invested in tobacco.

President Behrens encouraged members to attend stakeholder and SCORE meetings, as it is important to see blue shirts in the audience. He noted that he had made requests to CSUEU regarding health care for CSU retirees, and CSUEU President Pat Gantt came to the meeting to explain. Benefits and health care are a little different for CSU members, who still have the 100/90 formula for health benefits. CSU administration tried to change it, but CSUEU successful in stopping that attempt. Another issue that comes up a lot is the differences in dental and vision coverage, where the Chancellor’s Office is the contact. CSUEU has a continuing dialog with the Chancellor’ Office, and he will set up something for any members who have issues.
CSUEU has been busy working on the “Yes on 55” campaign to continue the Proposition 30 tax increase necessary for education – there will be budget cuts if Prop 55 doesn’t pass. CSUEU’s contract is up next year and they hope to protect their benefits and get raises. They will be in a better place if Prop 55 passes, and see what the Chancellor’s Office says, and possibly the governor.

In response to a question on how CSUEU is dealing with bargaining regarding retirement benefits, Mr. Gantt explained that it is mostly a matter of law. Retirement benefits were grandfathered in, and when CSUEU tries to raise retirement issues, the administration says it is outside the scope of bargaining. CSUEU fought hard to get fees waived for employees taking classes, and is now working to get fees waived for retirees. To a question on fair share fee cases, he noted that while the Supreme Court ended up with a tie and punted on the issue, there are other cases pending across the country and appointments to the Supreme Court are still very important. There are groups that attack collective bargaining in general as well as fair share fees, and the Right to Work Foundation is relentless in filing new cases. CSUEU is continuing to recruit members, gaining 2200 new members last year. He distributed a list of CSUEU chapter presidents and said he will try to get more interaction with CSR and CSUEU chapters, as well as a dialog for people planning to retire, as we have many common interests. Bobbi Estrada explained that she is working with CalPERS on updating members’ contact information and asked that information be put in the CSUEU newspaper, asking members who are retiring to update their e-mail and phone numbers. Mr. Gantt said CSUEU is trying to get back-up e-mail addresses, and can work with CSR if they have private e-mail information. Rollo Paternoster added that he will have a meeting with CSUEU, as he did with ACSS, to develop a process.

10. Audit & Program Reports, Headquarters

Rocco Paternoster gave a power point presentation detailing the results of the audit analyzing the status of the CSR corporation, followed by discussion of current programs and staff presentations. He noted that on August 19 he became Executive Director on an interim basis and to make an audit. A brief description of the organization is that it is run by members, who are represented by delegates; the Board of Directors is elected and has a fiduciary responsibility is to the entire corporation. He works for the CSR President, and staff works for him. The objective of the audit in the short term was to look at the operational continuity – to make sure that the existing operations of the corporation continue to serve the members. The long-term objective is to create operational efficiencies and run the corporation as a business -- to look at CSR’s existing programs, improve those programs, and develop new programs.

The process of corporate examination included leadership meetings for input and approval of ideas, staff meetings to find out what issues the staff has, and outside resource meetings. He researched the history of the Presidents Forum, getting all the information he could and sending out surveys to get information on membership wants and needs -- it will be a continuing practice. The membership program was the first program meeting, followed by the political action program -- how CSR does endorsements, contributions, and how political action works. Next was advocacy program, where CSR’s priority goal is the protection of members’ benefits and health care. The audit is now in the factual analysis phase of considering strengths and weaknesses. Organizational, economic, governance and program strengths are that CSR has an active leadership and knowledgeable membership, experience, great strength in its staff, and is financially stable. A big organizational weakness is that CSR has amazing subject matter experts, but a huge resistance to change, with fear of being taken advantage of and loss of control. Weakness in the membership program is a reliance on rollovers, when there is a current lawsuit claiming that rollovers are illegal.

After looking at strengths and weaknesses, Mr. Paternoster identified immediate needs, which were presented to the CSR Board for agreement. Members who are currently working with a specific staff person, will continue working with that staff member. For important issues or questions, members should use the main CSR e-mail and telephone number. There is no charge for members to call the CSR office, but there is a charge to call CSEA Accounting, Blanning & Baker, or other offices. The State Retiree will be kept exactly as it is, but we must increase organizational visibility – marketing and promotion did not suit the needs of the organization. There is a need to coordinate who does what with staff assignments and updated materials. Staff can design car magnets, hats, and shirts. On the subject of chapter finances and accounting, CSR’s accountant, Kenton Jones, will come to a meeting. In summary, he looked at everything and talked to all leaders he could reach and to outside vendors. He stressed the importance that members understand what their professional staff can do for them. Trinda Lundholm is working on a template for chapter newsletter uniformity if the board decides that chapters should continue to have newsletters.

In staff presentations, Corinne Wogksch explained her newly defined roll as lead on retirement pensions and benefits, becoming the CalPERS subject matter expert and interfacing with retiree and senior groups such as SCORE and the Congress of California Seniors (CCS). Internal job duties include the BGR Committee, Health Benefits and election coordinator. She is currently working on open enrollment.

Dani Schenone, membership coordinator, reported on the first target campaign/membership drive, with a new publication, “Welcome to Retirement – Join CSR Today,” and a promotion giving those joining a chance to win a Samsung 40-inch Ultra HD Smart TV. The new publication is designed to effectively clean up CSR’s message, and the PAC brochure has also been republished.

Trinda Lundholm reported that she coordinates production of the State Retiree and stories for the CSR website. She takes most of the photos and comes up with stories, reporting on CalPERS meetings and whatever is newsworthy. She is being helped by Dani Schenone and Jamee Villa and they are always looking for members’ ideas. She received 15 responses from veterans when she asked for their stories. As third-class mail takes three weeks for some people, there is now a pdf copy of the State Retiree on the website the same day it is printed. John Ortiz, an editor at the Sacramento Bee who slandered us, is no longer there, and we don’t know his replacement yet.

Jamee Villa related that she participated in the CSR audit over the past two months, working on communications and newsletters, helping Trinda Lundholm and Dani Schenone on the paper and creating a sample template for an e-newsletter. She is also working with Corinne Wogksch and CalPERS. She noted that 56% of CSR members are under age 70 and use social media, such as Twitter, Facebook and LinkedIn. She and Rocco Paternoster went over every page of the CSR website and are making sure that all information is secure. What they found is that content is not jumping out, and the board directed that chapter pages be removed. She gave a demonstration of the proposed new website based on the audit and survey results. The proposal is for a new, modern home page with no lock, a dedicated page for the Board of Directors and a full page for committees, explaining what each committee does and who is on the committee. A news page will have the latest news, with another page dedicated to legislative and political news. For help in finding a chapter meeting, there is a chapter page with a link to district representatives. The proposed website is not just for members, but also designed to appeal to potential members, and input is welcome. In light of the elimination of chapter pages, there was a suggestion that chapters create a Facebook page, and Mr. Paternoster asked that chapters get their information to Jamie Villa and she can add it the CSR Facebook page.

To a question on what chapters who used the CSR portal to update addresses should use to report bad addresses, Mr. Paternoster said he take all questions and points raised back to discuss with staff and get information out to chapter presidents. On the issue of the letter that some chapters previously sent out welcoming new members, a new letter will be developed in consideration of uniform business protocol, with the electronic signature of each chapter president.

Ted Toppin reported on the recently concluded legislative session, noting that in the last two weeks of August there were 1,059 bills sent to the governor. The governor signed AB 72, concerning out-of-network coverage. It is the same as AB 533 in 2015, saying there will be no surprise medical bills for patients who go to their in-network medical providers. It was a hard fought bill which doctors and insurers didn’t want. On the dark side, the governor vetoed AB 1878, which would have provided a cost-of-living adjustment for the $2,000 death benefit for state and school employees that hasn’t been raised in 20 years. The governor has been consistent for six years in vetoing any benefit, and his veto message says it is inappropriate to add to the unfunded liability.

Regarding the upcoming elections, the intensive process to determine endorsements has been concluded, and CSR has endorsed 86 candidates. CSR supports two of the 17 statewide ballot measures, which include issues on the death penalty, tobacco tax, gun control -- cultural war issues -- Propositions 55 and 61. Proposition 55 is important for schools and health care and actually important to retirees -- if it doesn’t pass, the governor will be looking at places to cut. Proposition 61 would mandate that the state pay no more for prescription drugs than the Veterans Administration pays. Mr. Toppin added that President Behrens did a great job at a press conference regarding Proposition 61, and he will provide a video of that press conference to CSR headquarters.
12. CSR Committee Reports – Individual committee reports were not given due to time constraints, but the following motions from committees were considered, and the printed report of the Health Benefits Committee is attached.

CSR 36/16/3 MOTION: Walgenbach, second by Sears – that the current PAC contribution of $.75 per member per month be extended to the IPAC for November and December 2016 and that the $1.00 per member per month be allocated to the IPAC for succeeding fiscal years until such time as the CSR Board determines the necessity to change. CARRIED.
